Alleged Safe Blowers Are Sent Up For Trial.

Frederick Turney, Frederick Johnson and Frank A. Beler received a preliminary hearing in Gleichen on Saturday before Magistrate Crowther of Stathmore and were committed to stand trial for blowing one safe and attempting to blow another the property of J. Lawther, M.L.A.

Cpl. Amy, Const. Clark of Gleichen and Cpl. Mott of Stathmore were called to the southern town upon discovery of the safe blowings. The three accused were trucked to a wheat field some miles away where they were found having a sleep.

A police court here on Tuesday was defended by Norman Dingle, K.C., of Calgary while the prosecution was handled by Mr. Blanchard, K.C., also of Calgary.

Senator Gershaw Writes

One of the most outstanding persons among the Indian population in Canada is Magistrate O. M. Martin, a small boy on the reservation near Brantford, he was chosen as one of the two boys who should be sent to Ontario to study. The council of the tribe undertook to pay the expenses out of the interest on the bank money belonging to the band. This department for some reason refused to sanction the expenditure and this was a great disappointment. Jim Moss was very big, was very noisy and was killed in action while flying over Germany as an officer in the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Martin, however, became a school teacher on the reserve. He has very decided views on the education of Indian children. He is strongly in favor of day schools rather than the residential schools of the various religious denominations. He says in the residential schools the children are taught from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., but in the residential schools there is only school for half a day and the children are working on the farm or in the kitchen the rest of the time. He is very much opposed to the paternal treatment of Indians and is very resentful of the domination of the average Indian agent. He thinks that all Indians should have the vote and be treated as Canadian citizens. He realizes that this change should be made gradually. He recalls that there was a time when it was commonly believed that "the only good Indian was a dead Indian." He says that opinion is no longer held and that the average Canadian now realizes that the Indian is a human being. He was one of the most interesting of the witnesses appearing before the committee and he urged that the new act that is being worked out will give the Indian tribes more responsibility and more control over their money so that they will gradually cease to be wards of the state. He said if the Indians were told that this change would be made, say in five years that they would send more of their boys and girls to high schools to prepare them for the work of self-help as Indian agents and that native officers would have a more sympathetic understanding of the tribes and hopes of these primitive people. He thought there should be more Indians in official positions in the departments also.

He was asked about the liquor situation. His opinion was that the Indians can get liquor almost anywhere from bootleggers. He said an Indian should be able to go into a store and purchase liquor. He said the fact that an Indian could not get liquor legally brought him into contact with the undesirable element in towns and cities much to his disadvantage.

His recommendations were that Indians should be given a better education, a better income and better homes. If this did not enable them to make a good living they should be under the same conditions as other people across the country. He did not recognize any weakness among the Indians.

Whether we can agree with the witness or not, his own record is a shining example of what can be done. Twenty-five years ago he left the reserve and was enfranchised. Within five years he joined the army and worked his way up so that he is now

New Ration Book Issued Next Month

Nearly one million people in Alberta are to town during the week of September 9-16, it will not be to the polling books of a general election, nor a census or annual fair. They will be calling for their new ration book No. 6.

Over 900,000 new ration books will be issued in Alberta, approximately half of them in northern Alberta, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced.

Specific dates during the week of September 9-16, 1946, will be set aside by the ration board in the Alberta region for distribution of the book within their territories. Local papers will have advertisements showing distribution points, and will tell what dates these will be open. Local ration boards and continuing ration book holders to secure their new book during these specific days, as no further distribution will take place until after September 20.

In the meantime the "late-comers," those who failed to get their books during the days set aside, will be without ration coupons during the intervening two weeks.

The services of volunteer workers are being enlisted by ration boards throughout the region to assist in the distribution of the new book. All ration book holders are being advised that they must bring their old ration books with them when applying for a new one. Likewise the green card marked "B 191" in the old ration book is to be filed in by each holder and be presented intact in the book when applying for a new book. "All information on this card should be retained in pen and ink," a Price Board official pointed out.

School Opens Next Monday Short Of Teachers

School opens on September 3rd much to the disgust of the majority of the young folks.

The local schools are two teachers short and it seems impossible to get them. Two teachers, J. A. Wright and R. W. Bick will teach the high school while Mrs. N. S. Sherbrook will teach grades 6, 7 and 8. Teachers are wanted for grades 1, 2, 3, 4 and five and up to the present there are no teachers in sight for these grades. This is the first time in the history of Gleichen that full staff was not booked for the opening school date. If there are any married women or others who can teach the lower grades and would apply for the jobs W. J. Pethman, the school secretary, would be the happiest man in these parts.

O. K. Crossett who has been driving one of the school vans for years is retiring from his job and now the school board is looking for another van.

Labor Day Thoughts

BY E. E. SIEBER

Deep unrest has marked Labor-Day activities in Canada ever since the surrender of our enemies. This has produced some concern among the general public about the future position of labor in our democratic world.

When we look only at the seething unrest by these strikes in the various industries there would seem to be some ground for apprehension. But if we stop long enough to remember the working man's lot in the "hungry 30's"—acute unemployment, starvation, bringing hunger and misery to many a home suffering from the loss of a job, often the coloring of the picture is somewhat changed.

Another fact to remember is this: Labor believes the present purchasing power of the dollar to be only 40 cents, despite of what government cost-of-living index says. This makes more understandable labor's effort to safeguard itself against any retrogression in its position in the post-war world.

Nevertheless the question posed by Carl D. Borje the other day is much to the point. Is it wise to tie up key industries at this critical point in our reconstruction task?

Community Theatre

After August 31, there will be no more Tuesday evening shows.

Only one picture a week to play—two days—Friday 8:30 p.m., Saturday 2:15 p.m. and at 8:45 p.m.

LOOKING at her husband as though it were his fault, Amelia Amelie complained, "This Chow Mein is too crisp." Her warm grey eyes narrowed in annoyance. "Now don't tell me that is the way I ordered it either. I know I said crisp but they didn't have to get it so brittle."

George Amelie grinned good-naturedly and winked at his daughter's and son-in-law. They started to smile, subdued as Mrs. Amelie spoke again. "Judy, eat your Egg Foo Yung. It's good for you, and you need it. I think I'll have to come and spend another week with you and get you built up."

Judy opened her mouth to say something, then started eating. Ted frowned. "She weighs as much as the ever did," he said.

"Well, she wouldn't if I didn't watch over her. Look what happened when you moved to Albany. Poor Judy was worn out just from the packing up. If I hadn't gone right along with her and helped her get settled she'd have been in bed for a month. . . and also I had to come up there every other week to see that she took care of herself. That's why I insisted that you move back here again near us so that I could keep a closer eye on her. Even now I hate to go off on this trip with George for fear she'll do something foolish."

George pulled out his watch. "We'd better hurry or we'll be late for the show."

The suggestion worked for Amelia never liked to be late for anything. But George was uneasy. "You've got an idea what was going through Ted's mind. The boy had a good healthy pride, and even though he was very much in love with Judy, there was a limit, to that Amelia's He hadn't learned that Amelia's crisp manner was just a cover up to hide a soft heart."

After they had left the young couple at their apartment and were on their way home, George spoke a suggestion. "Don't you think you're babying Judy a little too much? After all she's grown up and has been married a year."

Amelia almost drove through a stop light before she snapped. "Of course not. I know my daughter. She can't do things right without me. I've always looked after her, and I'll always have to."

George gave up. But it was time to do something about it. He lay awoke long that night as an idea formed.

At the office the next morning he stopped in the middle of preparations for a month's business trip through the west to phone Ted to lunch with him. It was going to take some careful planning to get around Amelia, but she had been born in Missouri and perhaps the old "show me" adage would work.

Things went along fairly smoothly for three weeks. New towns and new faces always appeared to Amelia on the day before they were to start their return trip. George came back to the hotel room to find her feverishly packing.

"We're leaving in an hour," she announced. "I got plane reservations by telling them that Judy was in a serious situation."

"Judy? What's happened?" "She . . . she . . . Oh, read the letter. It's there on the dresser."

George snatched a grin. "I don't see anything here to get excited about. It just says they've bought a ranch."

"Not only a ranch, but a cattle ranch," she almost shrieked.

"Well, why not? That's what Ted studied for at college." Amelia ignored him. "Imagine taking poor Judy out on a place like that. . . twenty miles from the nearest town. That letter's over a week old. . . Oh, my poor lamb! I'll allow in a desperate situation."

"I've got to get back there before she kills herself. . . I've mapped another leg shut. . . George managed to send a telegram. Ted. . . Get out the Welcome mat and make it big."

Ted tried his best. He even had neighboring cowboys on horseback meet them at the ranch gate to escort their last the last half mile. Amelia was impressed, but not for the reason George was hoping for. They found her at the ranch house, dressed in jeans, riding boots, and a orange silk shirt open at the throat.

Amelia gaped in belief. "Why, I was never so amazed in my life," she declared to George as they got into bed four hours later. "My Judy, dressed like a movie cowgirl. . . and proud of it. . . and the house, all in perfect order. . . and she wouldn't let me do a thing!"

"That dinner wasn't bad either," George added. "Bad! It was perfect. I couldn't have done better myself. It's amazing," she repeated, almost regretfully.

George chuckled. "Well, isn't she your daughter?" He would like to have seen Ted about now and said, "I told you so," as he recalled their lunch a month ago.

"Judy's really all that you could want her to be. Ted," he'd said. "Just give her a chance to break the apron strings and get going by herself and you'll see."

Ted hadn't looked too convinced then, but he had the proof now. In fact when he had said goodnight, he had whispered, "She's a regular chip off the old block," and winked and nodded at Amelia.

CHINESE DELEGATION

Has Been in Ottawa Studying Canada's Post Office Methods

Representing the first Chinese postal delegation to visit Canada, four officials from the Director General of Posts of China, have been studying Canadian post office methods in Ottawa.

The Chinese officials left China in July, 1945, and spent six months in Washington and one month in New York studying the postal improvements before coming to Ottawa. The delegation now are back in the United States where they will inspect postal facilities in Chicago and San Francisco before their return to China in September.

The delegation are studying the American and Canadian postal systems from the inner sanctum of the central organization to the outermost fringes. Each official looks after a particular division.

Fundamentally, the postal system of China is very similar to Canada's. They make use of air mail, postal notes, money orders and postal savings banks in the same way. Even their mechanical equipment is much the same, but their great difficulty is the lack of sufficient equipment to cope with the huge amount of mail. Despite inflation in China postal rates have been little affected and they are on a par with Canada.

Mr. Chang, who specializes in equipment and supplies, praised the Canadian postal system for its economic and efficient methods.

"Canada, which manufactures more paper than any country in the world, has the most effective way of conserving paper in the post office we've seen," said Mr. Chang.

Chinese officials expressed gratitude and appreciation for the co-operation extended them by Canadian postal authorities. Every opportunity was given them to make a careful study of the Canadian system.

Flying Nurse

Attends To The Sick Over A Wide Area In Australia

SYDNEY, Australia.—Travelling hundreds of miles through roads, deserts or rain to attend the sick is all in the day's work for Sister Myra Blanch, Australia's first "Flying Nurse." Appointed to the Flying Doctor Base at Broken Hill in the far west of New South Wales, she attends cases within 500 miles radius, reaching her patients by means of transport.

The Flying Doctor Service of Australia is an Australia-wide organization which provides medical aid to settlers in the far "backback" of the continent. In it, medicine, aviation and radio are combined in a unique service of goodwill. There are eight bases throughout Australia, each covering a radius of about 500 miles. At each base there is a doctor and at least one plane, fully equipped with medical supplies and stretchers.

Sometimes Sister Blanch accompanies the doctor on his trips, but she frequently stays out on a solitary journey to reach some case the doctor is too busy to attend. Nearly always the journeys are long and arduous, but she finds the discomforts worth while.

Stamp Collection

Historic Envelopes Were Auctioned In United States

NEW YORK.—A set of six envelopes commemorating the Royal visit to Canada and the United States in 1939 was auctioned for $40, at the third and final disposal of the stamp collection of the late President Roosevelt. The Canadian envelopes were postmarked June 7, 12 and 13. The American covers were cancelled June 10 and 11. All envelopes carried the Royal train postmark and were addressed to President Roosevelt at the White House in Washington.

Labor Day Thoughts

bership in organized labor today is five times that of 1933. This growth has given added impetus to already growing industrial monopolies until Labor-Industry struggles have become battles of the giants for power. And that in this contest the third party concerned—the consuming public—is apt to suffer most. Their interests are not taken into account as the struggle.

A prolonged dispute in any key industry is able to disrupt very seriously our whole economy; and there is fear in the minds of the public that this might happen.

Sympathy of the general public was never better portrayed than in the recent struggle that took place in Rochester, N.Y. On May 15th, 1946, the government of Rochester abolished 49 jobs in the department of public works. The reason for this was plain:

The telephone will reach you more quickly. If you are sure just where he is the telephone will do it quicker. But if it is good help you want and do not know just where to find it, our Want Ads are guides than others.

by the government's opposition to its employees joining a labor union. Pickets from the union (100 had joined) plus an Italian Baptist minister and a Lutheran minister appeared in front of the building. Some 200 were arrested; 100 of them were released after World War I and II.

That same day, the evening news—Times-Union—led off with an editorial fighting for labor's right to organize. Clerical leaders of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish organizations walked on the city manager and requested him to call in representatives of labor people and talk things over. The request was refused. The men remained in jail after good fascist methods—under "protective custody."

Then a corporation lawyer, of some influence, "twack his neck out" for labor and laid the legal foundation for labor's case before the public. The forces took up the cudgels until the civic government backed down from its fascist attitude toward labor. Only one of the danger signs on the horizon.

During the most severe labor unrest in the U.S.A. the President and Congress passed the bill with restrictive measures of labor's right to go on strike. The Senate wisely refused to make it law.

If labor's rights of organization and strike go, then democracy is on the way out and the camel of totalitarianism has its head and shoulders in the tent already to take full possession.

The most deplorable thing that could happen would be that continued strikes should so arouse public feeling as to compel governments to enact restrictive legislation against labor which has such a large interest in our common economy.

These domestic wars in industry can be as destructive as the total wars in international conflict. They can starve men, women and children and swallow up in a very short period the savings of half a life time of thrift.

Some other way out of this paralyzing effect of recurrent strikes should be found, based on mutual agreement, not legislative measures. No one wants any further freedoms curbed by legislation. But the distance between labor's interests and owners' interests must be bridged. That a radical element exists in Labor that would like to see a real crisis develop, so that an excuse might be given for setting up a Communist totalitarian government is becoming quite clear. We need to protect our democratic freedom and labor's rights in our democracy. We must be on guard against radicalism and labor itself must act wisely in this matter.

The writer is hoping for a day when both parties will see the advantage of mutual agreements arrived at with the use of force as now is the case. Perhaps it could best be achieved if labor had representation on ownership management and ownership had reciprocal representation on labor councils. This would bring understanding, resolve conflicts, eliminate costly and demoralizing strike action, and discover the full mutual advantage of uninterrupted production with satisfied labor and consuming public.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hutcheon have left for St. Louis, Missouri, where they will visit Mrs. Hutcheon's sister who is not very well. While down there Mrs. Hutcheon intends to see the world series ball games.

Next Monday is Labor day and a holiday. Last year the Gleichen folk will celebrate the occasion is not known. The day will not be wound up with a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Bolinger are leaving for Tennessee where they will in future reside. They came from Tennessee and have farmed in the district for over twenty years. They are going to miss Jake since he is a good story teller and their loved to listen to his stories. Mr. and Mrs. Dick Thomas, who farm some five or six miles north east of town will occupy Mr. Bolinger's farm.

CAREERS FOR WOMEN

Of interest to young women who are considering the question of a career, is a study of the directory of personnel of the civil service in Canada.

There are, of course, thousands of clerks in the service, and these come and go—remain doing a necessary job. But in this service also are, or have been women with special training, doing good work along special lines of whom little is known.

There was recently, for instance, in the department of External Affairs a young woman lawyer, acting as junior legal adviser.

With the Justice Department is also a young woman lawyer and others are working as solicitors in the Department of National Revenue.

With Mines and Resources, in the forest products division a woman is doing the work in timber pathology and another in the same department is engaged in fossil research.

With the National Film Board are women editors and research workers. A woman is in charge of rural distribution of films and one of the best producers is a woman.

The department of national health and welfare are most anxious for more qualified social workers, and for graduate nurses.

Perhaps to our surprise we find in the Department of Transport, a woman in charge of marine agencies and another the chief registrar of shipping.

In other departments are qualified women statisticians and economists and a field is open here for those with special training.

THE MIGHTY MITE

Lethbridge Experimental Station
This the season of the year when the mighty mite gets in his hardest jacks as poultry of all ages. The mite essentially a warm season predator on poultry and though a very small individual, difficult to see, can do untold damage when he gnaws up with numerous pale.

The most common mite in this area is the red mite, which actually is red only after a full feed of blood. This blood he obtains in the dark of night by sneaking up on the unsuspecting sleeping bird, puncturing the skin and then gorging himself on the warm red life giving blood. Then as daylight returns he silently makes his way back to his darkened hideout to spend the daylight hours in satisfied hum and pleasant dreams of further forays.

Undoubtedly most farm poultry houses harbor some mites and if the infestation is heavy serious damage is done to the birds. As the mite does not stay on the bird he cannot be found by examining the birds during the day time. Rather he should be looked for in cracks and crevices, in the nests, and the ends of roosts. Don't look for anything red but for greyish-white masses of mites that gather with their cast off skins and eggs. And if you find these take drastic action at once if you are interested in the welfare of your birds. A thorough clean-up of the house is the first step. This involves removing all the litter and nesting material, and then giving the house a thorough going over to remove dust accumulations in cracks, in the most grooves and in similar places. When this has been done a strong disinfectant solution should be sprayed thoroughly on all areas where mites might find refuge. This involves more than a brush as better penetration can be obtained into all cracks and crevices and this is highly important.

A wide variety of spray materials is available for use in destroying mites. Possibly the most readily available one on most farms is used crank-oil. If this is applied thoroughly and then all nests filled with clean nesting material there is little danger of reinfestation. However, never trust a mite but make periodic examinations to make sure that he hasn't
